Industrial History Of Northwest New Jersey

Saturday, November 5th
10 AM – 4 PM

Washington's Headquarters
Morristown

The program is sponsored by the Morris County Trust for Historic Preservation, the Morristown & Morris Township Library, and the National Park Service. Admission is free. Registration is required, at mcthp@verizon.net. A light lunch will be provided for a limited number of attendees. Carpooling is encouraged. Questions: 973-267-4717.

The natural environment of northwest New Jersey - think lumber, iron ore, waterways - gave rise to thriving industrial economic engines – mining, transportation, cement - whose built expressions remain today to tell their stories. Much of our industrial archaeology is crumbling and unrecognized, but still forms a rich background to modern lives.

A group of speakers will discuss their special interests and experiences in this complex area of historic research: Michael Douglas Henderson, former National Park Service superintendent (of Morristown National Historical Park), preservationist, museologist, and writer; Ian Burrow (pictured), Principal Archaeologist, Hunter Research (ret.), principal of Burrow into History, writer, teacher (elementary through graduate levels), history and cultural resource management; and David Peifer, Highlands Project Director, ANJEC, former executive director of the Upper Raritan Watershed Assn., preservation activist and historian.
